LINGER'S RECOMMENDATIONS. The Feature That Transcends All Others, He Says, Is the Soil of the Country

That Produces the Food of the People -Plan for Waterways Improvement sent a message to Congress to-day on WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.-The President

ces, which is in part as follows: In 1860 we had a public domain 1,055,911,288 acres. We have now 731,-354,081 acres, confined largely to the entain ranges and the arid and semiarid plains. We have, in addition, 368,

85,975 acres of land in Alaska. The public lands were, during the carliest administrations, treated as a pational asset for the liquidation of the public debt and as a source of reward for ur soldiers and sailors. Later on they were donated in large amounts in aid of the construction of wagon roads and railways, in order to open up regions in the West then almost inaccessible. All the principal land statutes were enacted more dact, the preemption and timber ulture act, the coal land and the mining acts were among these. The rapid disposition of the public lands under the sarly statutes and the lax methods of distribution prevailing, due, I think, to the belief that these lands should rapidly pass into private ownership, gave rise to the impression that the public domain was legitimate pre- for the unscrupulous, and that it was not contrary to good morals to circumvent the land laws. This igal manne, of disposition resulted passing of large areas of valuable ad and many of our national resources ed, and that the right to recover a part of such lands for the Government long ceased by reason of statutes of limitation.

There has developed in recent years deep concern in the public mind respector the preservation and proper use of our natural resources. This has been larly directed toward the conof the resources of the public in. The problem is how to save and how to utilize, how to conserve and nd that it is for the common good that erations.

Among the most noteworthy reforms tiated by my distinguished predecessor to the vigorous prosecution of land and and the bringing to public attention the necessity for preserving the reliation, for the maintenance and exion of our forest resources, and for preserving the resources, and for the maintenance and exion of our forest resources, and for the new system of inland waterways.

The real reads charge, and it is the best regulator of those rates that we have regulator of the regulato re the vigorous prosecution of land of the necessity for preserving the respoliation, for the maintenance and exenactment of laws amending the te statutes so as to retain governental control over that part of the public domain in which there are valuable deposits of coal, of oil, and of phosphate, and, in addition thereto, to preserve under conditions favorable to the public, of the lands along the streams in which the fall of water can be made to generate power to be transmitted in rm of electricity many miles to the point of its use, known as "water-power"

One of the most pressing needs in the of public land reform is that lands hould be classified according to their principal value or use

It is now proposed to dispose of agricultural lands as such, and at the same ras and phosphate contained thereir. This may be best accomplished by separatirg the right to mine from the title to the gave the delegates some encouragement uch of the latter as may be required for the extraction of the deposits.

But there are millions of acres of completely arid land in the public domain which, by the establishment of reservoirs for the storing of water and the irrigation of the lands, may be made much more fruitful and productive than the best lands in a climate where the moisture omes from the clouds.

One of the difficulties which has arisen is that too many projects in view of the available funds have been set on foot. The funds available under the reclamation statute are inadequate to complete these projects within a reasonable time.

I urge that the nation ought to afford the means to lift them out of the very desperate condition in which they now are. This condition does not indiare. This condition does not had cate any excessive waste or any corruption on the part of the Reclamation Service. It only indicates an overzealous desire to extend the benefit of tion Service. It only indicatess an overzealous desire to extend the benefit of reclamation to as many acres and as many States as possible. I recommend, therefore, that authority be given to issue not exceeding $30,000,000 of bonds from time to time, as the Secretary of the Interior shall find it necessary, the proceeds to be applied to the completion of the projects already begun and their proper extension, and the bonds running fen years or more to be taken up by the proceeds of returns to the reclamation fund, which returns, as the years go on, will increase rapidly in amount.

There is no doubt at all that if these bonds were to be allowed to run ten years the proceeds from the public lands, together with the rentals for water furnished through the completed enterprises, would quickly create a sinking fund large enough to retire the bonds within the time specified. I hope that while the statute shall provide that these bonds are to be paid out of the reclamation fund, it will be drawn in such a way as to secure interest at the lowest rate, and that the credit of the United States will be pledged for their redemption.

What I have said is really an epitome of the Secretary of sary to prevent monopoly and abuse from absolute ownership on the other.

I carnestly recommend that all the suggestions which he has made with respect to these lands shall be embodied in statutes, and, especially, that the withdrawals already made shall be validated so far as necessary and that the authority of the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw lands for the purpose of submitting recommendations as to future disposition of them where new legislation is needed shall be made complete and unquestioned.

I come now to the improvement of the inland waterways. He would be blind, indeed, who did not realize that the people of the entire West, and especially those of the Mississippi Valley, have been aroused to the need there is for the improvement of our inland waterways. How far, if properly improved, they would relieve the railroads or supplement them in respect to the bulkier and cheaper com-relieve the railroads or supplement them in respect to the bulkier and cheaper commodities is a matter of conjecture.

One of the projects which answers the description I have given is that of introducing dams into the Ohio River from Pittsburg to Cairo, so as to maintain at all seasons of the year, by slack water, a depth of 9 feet.

"It seems to me that in the development of our inland waterways it would be wise to begin with this particular project and carry it through as rapidly as may be. I assume from reliable information that it can be constructed economically in can be constructed economically in "What has been said of the Ohio River is true in a less complete way of the improvement of the upper Mississippi from St. Paul to St. Louis to a constant depth of 6 feet and of the Missouri from Kansas into the hands of persons who felt little of no responsibility for promoting the sational welfare through their development. The truth is that tile to millions of acres of public lands was fraudulently the right to recover a string of the Missouri from Kansas City to St. Louis to a constant depth of 6 feet and from St. Louis to Cairo to a depth of 8 feet. These projects have been pronounced practical by competent boards of army engineers, their cost has been estimated and there is business which will fallow the improvement.

which will follow the improvement.
"I recommend, therefore, that the present Congress in the River and Harbor bill make provision for continuing con-tracts to complete these improvements. I am informed that the investigation by the Waterways Commission in Europe shows that the existence of a waterway by no means assures traffic unless there is traffic adapted to water carriage at cheap rates at one end or the other of the stream. It also appears in Europe that the depth of the non-tidal streams is rarely more than 6 feet and never more how to utilize, how to conserve and develop; for no sane person can contain that it is for the common good that the blessings are only for unborn rations.

For reasons which it is not necessary here to state, Congress has seen fit to order an investigation into the Interior Department and the Forest Service of the Agricultural Department. The results of that investigation are not needed to determine the value of, and the necessity for, the new legislation which I have recommended in respect to the public lands and in respect to reclamation. I earnestly urge that the measures recommended be taken up, and disposed of promptly, without awaiting the investigation which has been determined upon.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Archie Sanders, United States collector of internal revenue at Rochester, N. Y., bobbed into public notice again to-day when eight members of the New York Republican delegation to Congress went to President Taft with a request that he be retained in office. This action marked a peculiar change about in conditions affecting Republican politics in New York State. The resignation of Mr. Sanders was once called for by President Roosevelt through Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou because Col. Roosevelt believed that this course would please Gov. Hughes, with whom Col. Roosevelt wished to be on good terms at the time. But Gov. Hughes declined to be duly grateful and Mr. Sanders's letter of resignation was not accepted. It has been lying on the desk of the Secretary of the Treasury ever

The members of the New York delegation in Congress who called on President Taft to-day in behalf of Mr. Sanders were Senators Depew and Root, and entatives Payne, Perkins, Vreeland, Fassett, Simmons and Knapp, all of them up-State men. They told the President that Mr. Sanders had been a good collector and they would like to have him reappointed. They spoke of the candidacy of W. V. Downer of Buffalo for Mr. Sanders's office and said they had heard he was likely to get it. As a reason against the appointment of Mr. Downer they explained that Buffalo was not in the internal revenue district over which Mr. Downer sought to assume jurisdic-

After their interview with the President all the members of the delegation which called on him expressed the belief that Mr. Sanders will be retained.

The call of the Republican Senators and Representatives at the White House to urge the reappointment of Mr. Sanders has an interesting and peculiar bearing on the political situation in New York State. In a measure the New York delegation put themselves in the position of asking President Taft to reappoint to a Federal office a man who had been denounced by close friends of Gov. Hughes as an enemy of the Governor and his policies and whose resignation had been demanded by President Roosevelt. However, in view of Col. Roosevelt's change of attitude with respect to that demand it is evident that he will shed no tears if Sanders is reappointed.

it is evident that he will shed no tears if Mr. Sanders is reappointed.

The Sanders incident was the real beginning of the strained political relations between Col. Roosevelt and Gov. Hughes. Col. Roosevelt and his advisers on New York political matters thought that the Governor had shown a boorish spirit. They held that if the Governor really had not wanted President Roosevelt to understand that Mr. Sanders's removal would be pleasing to the Governor, he might at least have made such a statement to President Roosevelt, coupled with an expression of appreciation of the President's desire to strengthen the Governor's hands. It is true that Col. Roosevelt was anxious to have Gov. Hughes renominated in 1908, but the considerations which actuated him in this particular were entirely apart from considerations which actuated him in this particular were entirely apart from any feelings of friendship for New York's Executive. The breach between Col. Roosevelt and Gov. Hughes, caused by the Governor's refusal to express appre-ciation of what Col. Roosevelt had done in the Sanderson case, has never been healed.

"I believe from the showing made that a contributory system would be considerably less burdensome to the Government in the end, and it may perhaps be wise to unite what is really a kind of life insurance with the partial contribution by the Government to the fund out of which the payments are to be made, that when the person leaves the service under any condition he shall still have retained some interest in it.
